Soapbox - Revising the Model Dam Safety Program

Keith Mills, P.E., G.E., Oregon Water Resources Department

Model dam safety program task group

The model dam safety program work group is updating this document, and will solicit feedback at this soapbox presentation. The model dam safety program is the ASDSO/FEMA national guidance for dam safety programs. It was developed for state dam safety programs, but is also applicable to federal and private dam safety programs. The first model was developed by ASDSO pioneers in 1987. This will be the fourth update, with the last one in 2006. A new outline has been developed, consistent with what is important for dam safety programs now. Significant changes are proposed to the organizational structure. There will be more emphasis on existing dams, with new sections on risk evaluation, public communication and information, and incident response. Work group members will discuss the key elements of the redrafted model program and will solicit input from the soapbox audience to help in finalizing this guidance document. Other authors: The model dam safety program work group is updating this document, and will solicit feedback at this soapbox presentation. The model dam safety program is the ASDSO/FEMA national guidance for dam safety programs. It was developed for state dam safety programs, but is also applicable to federal and private dam safety programs. The first model was developed by ASDSO pioneers in 1987. This will be the fourth update, with the last one in 2006. A new outline has been developed, consistent with what is important for dam safety programs now. Significant changes are proposed to the organizational structure. There will be more emphasis on existing dams, with new sections on risk evaluation, public communication and information, and incident response. Work group members will discuss the key elements of the redrafted model program and will solicit input from the soapbox audience to help in finalizing this guidance document. Additional authors include: Hal Van Aller, Doug Johnson, Ben Green, Mark Ogden, Ken Smith, Dusty Meyers, Tony Fernandes.